

Ad Leasing

A web-based interface for streamlined sales of leasing products

AdLeasing is a solution that provides IT support to the sales of leasing products. Modules support the entire process from preparing quotations and offers to concluding the actual contract. AdLeasing integrates tightly with all back-end systems and other sources of information that play an important role in the process.

Product design

AdLeasing provides a wide range of available settings so products can be configured to reflect the needs and capabilities of loan intermediaries and resellers.

New services and products can be added easily, and the system offers flexible configuration options allowing users to achieve optimized financial effects. Adopting this business approach, leasing providers improve the competitive position of their products while driving down costs.

Modular solution

AdLeasing provides separate sets of functionalities for resellers, customers and public-facing sites used to prepare estimates. The solution supports quotations, approvals and agreement conclusion, sales tracking and risk assessment.

At the core of the system is the support for sales processes along with configurable financial calculations. This functionality is connected to integration, reporting, administrative, performance management and alerting modules.

Solution modularity allows leasing providers to implement a system that is customized to their business requirements.

AdLeasing contains a configurable online interface that guides the user through quotation and offer preparation to the final application complete with all the required documentation. The interface allows credit intermediaries to directly contact the leasing provider at any time during the process of preparing the offer and having the application approved.

User portals

Customer portal allows customers to view their balance and the payments they have made on active leasing contracts. It provides customers with the ability to control their information and communicate easily.

Reseller portal provides the ability to conclude leasing deals at points of sale. This approach significantly cuts the time needed to conclude a deal and reduces the number of interactions between the customer and the leasing provider.

Front-office portal allows the leasing provider's employees to conclude lease agreements and manage active agreements.

Back-office portal supports agreement management, risk management and integration with back-end systems, insurance carriers, and other information providers.

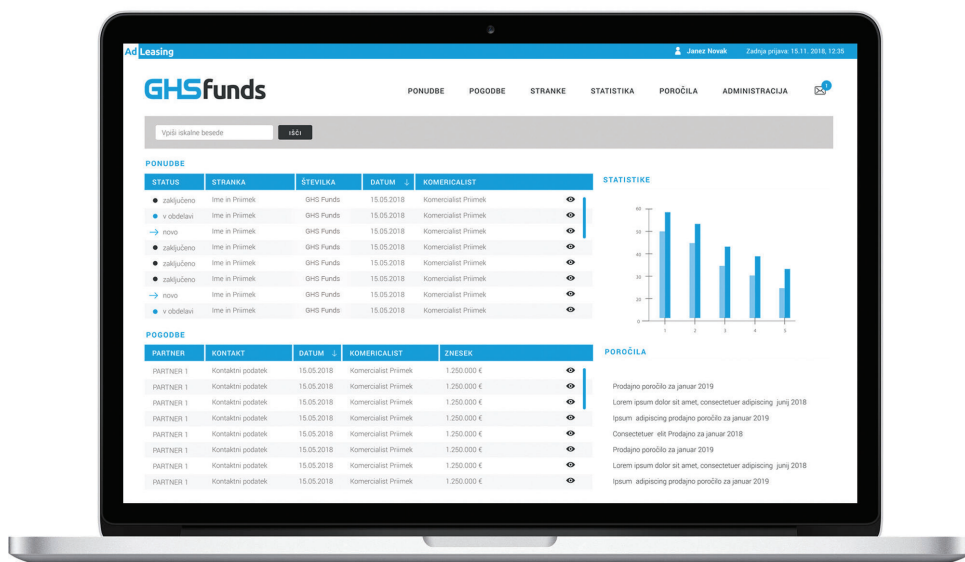

Administration portal is a tool where administrators manage user permissions and roles, edit code tables and configure other system parameters.

Flexible financial calculator

At the core of the solution is a highly configurable financial calculation module that uses individual product definitions to calculate amortisation plans. It boasts a broad range of features and streamlines the configuration process for calculating interest and repayment plans.

High level of security

Data and document confidentiality require high degrees of security. AdLeasing has a built-in flexible system of user roles and permissions to ensure data remains confidential and is used securely even in more complex enterprise environments.
